at Benedictine University

Why study business and economics at Benedictine?

When you choose to become a Business and Economics major at Benedictine University, you will receive thorough exposure to business and economic principles and how they are applied to the national economy and the business world. You will also be prepared to continue graduate studies in business or management. Benedictine University offers you:

- Opportunities to gain practical experience while earning a salary and college credit through internships
- Location in Chicago's western suburbs where you will be near the high-tech industries, many with national headquarters nearby
- Membership in the Business Club which organizes field trips, guest speakers and social events around your business interests
- Opportunities to study topics in related programs, such as opinion research, computer science, advertising and organizational behavior, that will help you develop additional marketable skills
- Close contact with our professional faculty that is possible because of our low student-to-faculty ratio
- Broad-based education that will help you not only get your first professional job, but be an asset in earning future promotions

What careers are available with a Business and Economics degree?

Our program has been designed to provide you with the necessary theoretical and practical background for careers in the following fields:

- Accounting
- Business
- Economics
- Finance
- Management
- Marketing

If you wish to teach business and economics in high school, you may also register with the School of Education and complete the course requirements needed for teacher certification.

How does the program work?

As a Business and Economics major, you'll acquire the broad base of knowledge represented by the University's core courses taken by all students that will prove valuable in your future career development and daily life as a citizen of your community. You'll learn the fundamentals of the economic system, both as it functions at the national level and within the corporation, the principles of accounting and managerial finance, and the principles of mathematics along with knowledge in each of the related social sciences: sociology, political science, psychology and ethics. To complete your major, you'll choose at least four additional upper-level business courses such as marketing, managerial finance, human resource management, investments, consumer behavior or international marketing. To demonstrate the knowledge you have acquired, one of your 300-level department electives should be a 380 capstone course from among FINA 380, MGT 380 or MKTG 380.
