Q	 Saint Procopius Abbey St. Procopius Abbey, the home of our Benedictine monastic community, rests atop an oak-hickory wooded hillside. The building represents characteristics of Benedictine monasticism such as optimism, simplicity, and order, and creates the atmosphere of peace, restraint, and moderation necessary for the monastic lifestyle. The Abbey was designed by renowned Chicago architect Edward Dart (who also designed Chicago's Water Tower Place). In 1973 the American Institute of Architects named the Abbey one of the most outstanding buildings in the United States.
P	 Sacred Heart Monastery & Villa St. Benedict The 47-acre campus serves as the home of the Benedictine Sisters of Sacred Heart Monastery and the Villa St. Benedict, a continuing care retirement community.
S	 Birck Hall of Science The Katherine and Michael Birck Hall of Science is a new 70,000-square-foot building containing 34 state-of-the-art laboratories, individual research labs, and digital classrooms. It also serves as 3,000-square-foot home for the Jurica Nature Museum.
T	 Stone House Built as a farmhouse in 1852 by Morris Neff, the stone house served as the original St. Procopius Abbey from 1896-1901. Since then, it has served as the home of many laborers hired by the monks to maintain the Abbey, farm, and schools.
N	 Chicago On a clear day, you can often see the skyline of the city of Chicago.
