WHY STUDY NUTRITION & ALLIED HEALTH AT BENEDICTINE MESA?

The Benedictine University Mesa Nutrition & Allied Health major is designed to provide students with a strong foundation in nutrition and science that prepares them for careers in public, community or private health programs or clinical and graduate programs. Courses in written and oral communications, ethics, research, and social and behavioral sciences provide a strong interdisciplinary foundation.

Students develop their skills by practicing their craft in a fully stocked and operating kitchen laboratory. They develop an understanding of food science, cultural foods and experimentation with food. Their coursework is strong not only in nutrition, but also in anatomy, physiology, chemistry and microbiology. Specialty courses in health education, program evaluation, group process, food systems and policy are designed to develop knowledge and skills as a health educator. Students gain understanding of nutrition through case studies, laboratories, and finally a field experience designed to apply learning in a real-world setting.

State-of-the-Art Nutrition Lab

Our nutrition lab, located in Gillett Hall, contains three full operating kitchens where three courses are offered: Food Science and the Food Science Lab, Cultural Foods and Experimental Foods. The lab is also used for special projects, such as the creation of educational videos in collaboration with our Communication Arts department.

Capstone

Your Benedictine career will be capped off with a senior Capstone class. Our Nutrition majors will gain hands-on experience at a local assisted living community or a clinic where they provide and assist with nutritional education. This course puts BenU Mesa students one step ahead of their competition and provides them with practices that future employers are looking for.

SAMPLE COURSES:

- CHEM 1101: Introduction to Chemistry
- BIOL 3258: Human Physiology
- THEO 2252: Business Ethics

- NUTR 3300: Nutrition Aspects of Disease
- NUTR 3359: Capstone

BENEDICTINE IS IN CO+HOOTS

If you’ve ever thought about being your own boss after you graduate college, then you should apply for the CO+HOOTS Institute of Entrepreneurship. Students will partner with CO+HOOTS, Arizona’s largest coworking space, to create connections and contacts while learning how to grow, launch and sustain their own business. Surrounded by fellow entrepreneurs, plus our expert faculty and staff advisors, students will be able to engage in hands on learning experiences from some of the nation’s fastest scaling companies --> Did you know that Uber started at CO+HOOTS? Learn more at www.ben.edu/mesa/cohoots.
At Benedictine Mesa you will find not only academic excellence in a well-rounded liberal arts environment, but also a values-based community in the Catholic, Benedictine tradition. You will receive individual attention and unique opportunities to build a resume that will prepare you to step out into the world upon graduation. Our faculty, who are experts in their fields, will inspire you, while our academic and career counselors will help guide and prepare you for life after college.

I decided I wanted to become a sport psychologist when I realized how much nutrition plays into the physical and mental health of an athlete. It’s true when they say that “baseball is 80% mental and 20% physical.” Giving the body the nutrients it needs to compete at a high level can drive someone’s career from being good to great. I have learned so much just in the nutrition lab alone. Learning how to cook my own food, what ingredients are in food and the time management needed to put into a healthy lifestyle has been something that has not only benefited me personally, but will be something I will take with me in my career. Playing baseball is my passion and because of BenU I have found my other passion and my future career.”
